EXIT BASEBALL

With the recent winning of the World Series, and the later selection of players for two new National League clubs — Houston and New York — the big events of Major League baseball have come to pass for 1961.

The New York Yankees have embarked on a new era, possibly, and it may be that this modern team will go down in history as being more potent than even the fine Yankee teams of the 1920's and 1930's.

The Yankees won the World Series without the full services of their most dangerous hitter, Mickey Mantle. They won the pennant and the World Series with great pitching a factor which has been overlooked by many writers.

The Yankees, for example, did not win the team batting title in the American League. The Detroit Tigers won it. And Detroit, which everyone agrees, has great pitchers, lost to the Yankees because of New York's superior pitching staff. This is the staff that writers and managers alike agreed would be a question mark back in the spring.

In fact, it now seems apparent that the Yankees should have won the World Series, in 1960, and that Stengel threw, it away by not pitching Whitey Ford in the first game, so that he would be available for three stints on the mound.

Ralph Houck has quit, a goal to shoot at the managerial record of Casey Stengel, and it seems he's going after it with gusto.

KNOW THE WEATHER

By Edward H. Sims

Is the hurricane season over? Why do these storms strike only in the east?

No the hurricane season is not over. These storms often occur in October and even into November. By December they are usually a thing of the past.

Hurricanes strike the eastern United States, and occasionally the middle states via the Gulf, because they spawn over water. Their course is either north or northeast, though they sometimes move northwest out of the Gulf.

They seldom if ever strike the west coast of the United States and should they do so, the Rocky Mountains protect the western states, acting as a barrier which breaks up such storms as they move westward.

Thus, the western states are free from these tropical-bred maritime cyclones.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Oct. 15, 1961.

Editor, The Times-Virginian

No words ever written were more true than those of the title of your article in The Times-Virginian, October 5, "Religion Has Not Failed." I am most sure all truly converted born again Christians will agree to that, religion has not failed, neither can it fail; if it should fail, Christ's mission to this earth would have been in vain, which would mean God's plans for the salvation of mankind has failed and we know God's plans never fail. Neither is the challenge any different today from what it was in the past, unless using St. Paul's words, we might say it is even greater, Rom. 13-11. He says, "and knowing the time, that now it is high time, to awake out of sleep, for now is our slavation nearer than when we believed." This whole chapter is a challenge to everyone to put on the armour of light for earth's dark night of sin is far spent, the day of the Lord is at hand.

No one will deny that there are various creeds, philosophies, and faiths in the world today, but let's have a look at the word "religion." Webster defines it as - any system of faith, piety, devotion, fidelity, so we see that religion could mean for some mere idol worship. However the word religions is found only about 5 or 6 times in the Scriptures; sects is mentioned a few times, which means practically the same thing. In Acts 26:5 Paul mentions it as "our religion" - in Gal. 1:13, 14, he again refers to it as "in times past in the Jews religion how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God and wasted it, and profited in the Jews religion above many my equals, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers." And these traditions of the fathers and doctrines and commandments of men. Jesus condemned – Matt. 15:2,9 .....

No, as you say, there is no reason to believe in the pessimistic conclusions of some, if we trust in God's final purpose and power to overrule, we will find that within the setting of a life span, even incidents of despair will fit in purposefully. Often when we experience a difficult situation we become panic stricken and fight against God, instead of holding to our faith until God see us through even though millions may be against God, and there are millions yet, who know him not, God is still on his throne, and we have nothing to fear if we can say with Paul, "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Acts 26:19.

'62 CORVAIR MONZA

NEW FACE, SAME SPORTING HEART

We might as well tell you straight off: Corvair's the car for the driving enthusiast that lets you out? Maybe. Maybe not.

Until you've driven one, you really can't say for sure, because Corvair's kind of ride is like no other in the land. The air-cooled rear engine sees to that. You swing around curves flat as you please. You whip through the sticky spots other cars should keep out of in the first place. (Especially this year, now that you can get Positraction as an extra-cost option.) You stop smoothly, levelly with Corvair's beautifully balanced, bigger brakes.

Corvair's found other new ways to please you this year. A forced-air ventilating defroster are standard equipment on all coupes, sedans and both Monza and Greenbrier Wagons. So are dual sunshades and front-door armrests and ashtrays. Also some other goodies. You'll note some new styling, inside and out. Nice. And safety-belt installation is easier, too, and cheaper.

So you can see we haven't really done much to Corvair this year. Why on earth should we? If this car, just as she is, can't make a driving enthusiast out of you, better take a cab.

And here's America's only thoroughbred sports car, the '62 CORVETTE. We think. If you drive a Corvette after your first sampling of a Corvair, you may not. It's a two-car man. And who could blame you?

FUTURE WATER SUPPLY NEEDS OF CONCERN TO SCIENTISTS

Water use in the United States quadrupled from 1900 to 1950. It is expected to double again by 1975. For this reason it is urgent that an effective job of conservation be done, says J. H. Lillard, agricultural engineer at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

To make sure enough water will be available to future America requires a better understandirg of rainfall, runoff relationships, and how they are affected by soils, land use, geology,, conservation practices, management, and other watershed features.

A total of 14 watersheds in Virginia have been instrumented to yield information to shed light on the problem. They range in size from 182 acres to over 3,000 acres.

An economical and effective measuring device called the "Virginia V-notch weir" has been developed to measure volumes of runoff water. Electronic computers are now processing the mass of data collected on the project to date.

Results so far have been concerned with development of suitable sampling techniques, the design, installation, and calibration of measuring stations, and developing programs for electronic computation of the data.

This phase of the research is almost complete, says Lillard, and the next step will be the analysis and evaluation of the rainfall-runoff relationships. These will be studied as they are influenced by various watersheds and management conditions.

Watersheds under study are showing wide variations in their runoff behavior, according to Lillard. He adds, "Unfortunately, the research has not progressed far enough to assign these difference to specific watershed features. The examples, through, clearly indicate the urgent need for such data in making efficient and economical designs for all types of water control structures and water use programs."
